I wish.../If only...

Function

Expressing a wish, regret and desire.

Illustration

Imagine the following situations:

1. Imagine you were taking an exam and you failed to remember the information you learned by heart!

This situation happened in the past, right?

The next day, you meet your friend and say:

“I wish I had revised well.”

Expressing regret

2. Imagine you were walking down the streets and you suddenly stopped by a shop and wished to buy the newest fancy products showcased! But you didn't have enough money...

This situation made you wish to have a lot of money!

You went home and said to your mom!

“I wish I were a millionaire!”

Expressing a wish

3. Imagine you always come late to your class. Your teacher complains and tells you:
“I wish you would not arrive late all the time!”

Rule:

1. Expressing regret: (about a past situation)

You regret that you did not revise well even though you've had enough time.

wish + past perfect.

I wish I had known the answer.

I wish I had woken up early.

2. Expressing a wish: (about a future desire)

You dream about being a millionaire. You really want to have money to be able to buy everything you desire but it's unreal (at least, at the present time).

wish + past simple.

Remark: you do not say: “I wish I was...”, rather say: “I wish I were...”.

I wish I were you...

I wish my friends were here to support me...

3. Complaining: (about a present situation)

You complain about a behavior that annoys you or express your dissatisfaction with a present situation.

✓ We often use this kind of expression to change a certain behavior.

wish + would + verb (infinitive)

I wish you would come earlier.

I wish you would clean after you.

Note:

You can make the regret stronger by using “if only” instead of “I wish”.

E.g.

If only I had followed my father’s advice.

[I wish I had followed my father’s advice].
